RAILROAD INTERESTS CAREFULLY SERVED.

Wall Street Panic Brought the Magnates to an Agreement That Will Last.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, June 9.-The bank statement of Saturday closed a week of irregular price changes. Speculative Wall street did not look for such an exhibition as was reflected in an increase of $21,281,600 in leans and a decrease of $7,911,550 in the surplus reserve.

Calmiy considered, there is nothing in the bank statement to cause alarm. At least four important financial undertakings culminated during the week, each calling for considerable funds. These, in the order of their influence on the local money market, were the payment on the $50,000,000 ircrease in Pennsylvania Railrond stock, calling at the issue price for $60,000,000; the payment of $5,000,000 to the Consolidated Tobacco Company syndicate; the refunding opera-tions in connection with the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad and the heavy purchase of demand sterling bills by J. Piercause of demand stering bits by 3. Prer-port Morgan & Co. to meet the second in-stallment of 19 per cent on the American subscription toward the British consoli-dated loan. According to the weight of opinion, however, the effect upon the money market will be but incidental to the week and finited to a few days. With money flowing in from the interior, released through Government bond purchases, and receipts from Alaska and the Klonlike, rates will speedily relax.

Northern Pacific Settlement.

Northern Pacific Settlement.
In the early days of the week stocks were more or less under the influence of the Northern Pacific settlement, by which harmony of Interest among such great systems as the Union Pacific, Northern Paceins as the Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Burlington, St. Paul and Chicago and Northwestern is not only restored, but will be conserved for all time. If Wall street wants better news than this, then speculative Wall street is hard to please, for no more important announcement concerning American railroads and the policy of their future management has ever been made public.

the policy of their future management has ever been made public.

The full importance of the amicable arrangement is probably not yet appreciated it will be made more apparent, however, as time goes on, manifesting itself first in the make-up of the harmonizing element which is to enter the Northern Pacific Board, and then in the continued satisfactors over the continued satisfactors.

which is to enter the Northern Pacific Board, and then in the continued satisfactory reports of railroad earnings, through the maintenance of rates and working of economies in every department of mainagement and operation.

In no section of the country is the working of the new idea better illustrated than in the Southwest. There has been, of course, a great improvement in industrial and crop conditions in the territory traversed by the Atchison, Southern Pacific and Missouri Pacific roads, Great as this improvement has been, however, it is self-evident that if the old tariff wars, which used to convulse that section, had continued there would be no such marvelous showing of earnings as those recently exhibited by the Southern Pacific, Atchison, Missouri Pacific and other roads in that territory. It is to the Southwest now that speculative Wall street is looking for its next important railroad developments, and in this respect the speculators are not missed by the conservative banking interests. What the plans are, however, concerning Missouri Pacific and some other properties and how hear they are to maturity is as a scaled book, but the matter will doubtless serve to keep interest alive for some time to come.

tion in a foreign tongue before the mission-aries had acquired the language held a large mixed audience both yesterday after-into the beef charges submitted its voluminous report. In it Doctor Daly's testimony, regarding analysis of the beef he had made, was severely criticised. The report also alluded to General Miles.

Doctor Daly frequently said he had been unfairly treated. He refused to answer the criticism of the court, beyond stating that his testimony spoke for itself and his record spoke for him. He said the case was closed, so far as he was concerned, and he would take no further notice of it. But to his friends Doctor Daly taked freely regarding the report and seemed to broad over it. His friends advised him to go away on a Rocky Mountain hunting trip and he did so. He frequently hunted with General Miles and William Cody. After his return he did not show much improvement. About 5:35 this morning Miss Mary Short, his housekeper, went to call Doctor Daly for breakfast. Getting no response she peered in and saw him lying on the floor, with a revolver at his side. A builted hoigh the right temple showed where the bullet from the empty cartridge went. Doctor Daly was a native Virginian and during the Civil War enlisted in Company E. Fifth Virginia Volunteers. He was in many engagements and was captured at Lee's Mills. After the war he went to Philadelphia and studied medicine at Jefferson College.

borhood of Park and Jefferson avenues, the most original and up-to-date manner is employed by a domestic of that locality in her correspondence with a policeman whose beat covers the vicinity.

According to the statements of those who made the discovery of the novel method of communication, when the domestic wishes to impart her tender sentiments to the bluecoat she writes them upon a large sheet of wrapping paper and posts this upon the rear gate in the alley. Soon the tail policeman for whom her heart yearns comes sauntering along the alley, ostensibly to investigate the disposal of garbage. His eye catches sight of the missive and his heart beats with tumultuous gladness, for it tells him that she is still "his'n" and he is "her'n."

it tells him that she is still "his'n" and he is "her'n."
Friday afternoon she came out to the gate carrying a hammer and a large piece of paper. Tacking the paper upon the gate, she wrote upon it the following sentence, which was evidently in answer to a proposal of marriage: "All right! Just name the day."
One of the neighbors in passing through the alley saw it and added a clause. This was noticed by the lovestck lady, and she at once accused the girl who is employed at the next house of trying to destroy her dream of bilsa. An altercation resulted, and near-by residents could hear such words as "heartless flirt," "mean old thing" and other opprobrious designations.

The Humor of Private John Allen. In due time John delivered his "maiden speech" in Congress, proved to be one of the lucky ones, and took an instant and secure hold on the suricular appendage of the House, which he has held ever since and which he would continue to hold should he remain in the House till the crack of door. The members regard Allen as a om. The members regard Allen as a dsend, as a welcome and grateful relief godsend, as a welcome and grateful relief from what the late lamented Mr. Mantalini would have denominated "the demnition, horrid grind" of the Congressional mill. John arose to make his "maiden speech" an obscure member. Next morning he awoke to find himself famous, as did Lord Byron after the publication of the opening cantos of Childe Haroid; and the fame of the Mississippi humorist was as fairly won and as justly bestowed as was that of the English poet.

and as justiy bestowed as was that of the English poet.

The river and harbor bill was up. John wanted to offer an amendment making an appropriation for the Tombigbee River. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Willis, of Kentucky, had promised him time and had then forgotten it. John asked unanimous consent to address the House, and Willis tried to help him get it, but some one objected, whereupon John, with tears in his voice and looking doieful as a hired mourner at a funeral, said, with melancholy accent: "Well, I should at least like to have permission to print some remarks in the Record and insert "Laughter and applause" in appropriate places." That was his atone of the most common abuses of the House, "the leave to print," tickled the members greatly, and he secured the unanimous consent which he desired. He closed that speech litelf. He wound up by saying: "Now, Mr. Speaker, having fully answered all the arguments of my opponents, I will retire to the cloakroom a few moments to receive the congratulations of admiring friends:" which set the House and galleries wild with delight. He did retire to the cloakroom, and did receive the congratulations of admiring friends:" which set the House and galleries wild with delight. He did retire to the cloakroom, and did receive the congratulations of admiring friends:" which set the House and galleries wild with delight. He did retire to the cloakroom, and did receive the congratulations of admiring friends, a performance which has been going on at frequent intervals ever since.—Saturday Evening Post.
